Context and Mission

In 2012, Mayor Frank G. Jackson, the Cleveland Metropolitan School District, the Cleveland Teachers Union, charter schools, civic leaders, business, philanthropy, community, religious organizations, and parents formed Cleveland's Plan for Transforming Schools. Its goal is to ensure every child in Cleveland attends a quality school, and every neighborhood has a multitude of great schools from which families can choose. These community stakeholders built the Cleveland Plan upon growing and expanding the number of quality schools in Cleveland – district and charter – and holding schools to the highest standards. They work in partnership to create dramatic student achievement gains for every child. The Cleveland Plan has four major components:

- Grow the number of high-performing district and charter schools in Cleveland and close or replace failing schools;
- Focus the District's central office on crucial support and governance roles, and transfer authority and resources to schools;
- Invest and phase in high-leverage system reforms across all schools from preschool to college and career; and,
- Create the Cleveland Transformation Alliance to ensure accountability for all public schools in the city.

In November 2012, Mayor Jackson established the Cleveland Transformation Alliance, a public-private partnership responsible for ensuring accountability for all public schools in the city. The Alliance's board of directors is a highly committed group of community leaders representing the school district, partnering charter schools, parents, educators, nonprofits, businesses, and foundations. The mayor serves as the chair of the board of directors. The Alliance has four interconnected roles: ensure fidelity to the citywide education plan, assess the quality of all Cleveland schools, communicate with parents about quality school choices, and monitor the growth and quality of the charter sector in Cleveland.

Primary Responsibilities

The Cleveland Plan envisions a portfolio of quality public schools, both District and charter, that meet families' and students' needs in our city. In support of the Cleveland Plan, the Transformation Alliance has created resources such as its School Quality Guide and interactive website, which provide objective information on all the district and charter schools in the city.

Because public school choice is an essential aspect of the Cleveland Plan, the Navigator's role is, primarily, to work directly with families whose children are transitioning from preschool to kindergarten and from 8th grade to high school. Navigators will guide families, help them learn about their public school options, and decide which school best meets their children's needs. Navigators will also help them enroll in the public schools they choose.
