Ohio Youth Resilience Collaborative

Promoting resilience and empowering youth, families and communities

o Youth Resilience Collaborative is a community-based prevention work based on a scientifically-informed approach that facilitates sustained, delivery of evidence-based prevention and prevention programs. The collaborative is a partnership between the Ohio Department of Education and Human Ecology, the Ohio Department of Public Health, and College of Agriculture and Environmental Sciences at Ohio State University that builds on local expertise and relationships. The OYRC is using this research-based framework to systematically address opioid prevention in rural communities. The goal is to reduce opioid use, promote mental wellbeing, and increase individual, familial, and community resilience.

OYRC provides technical assistance at the county level to community partners implementing evidence-based prevention programs at the county level. In addition, OYRC partners with the Center on Education and Training for Employment to conduct comprehensive program evaluation and disseminate findings to schools and community stakeholders.

OYRC Program Highlights

- Created out of a passion to address the opioid crisis sweeping across communities in Ohio
- Purpose: provide evidence-based mental health promotion and substance use prevention programming
- Delivery of evidence-based programs facilitated by OSU Extension and community partners
- OYRC strives to increase protective factors

- OYRC programs contribute to increased community-wide social support services for mental wellbeing and reduced harm caused by substance use at the familial and community level
- Participants in our programs complete content-based surveys, providing critical data to be evaluated by our team of research experts at OSU's Center on Education and Training for Employment (CETE)
- Skills-based programs offered include school-based, family-based, and community-based
